'Deb's unique skin safety cradle helps ensure that the necessary skin care facilities are provided for mobile employees to use throughout the working day'

Legislation requires employers to provide adequate skin care facilities.

Inadequate skin care facilities can lead to poor personal hygiene which is unsightly and can reflect negatively on the company the employee represents. Lack of provision could also result in skin disease and compensation claims.

Skin hygiene is an important issue for everyone whatever their working environment - particularly as hands are the main culprit in transferring potentially harmful germs.
